

The frontline: How LGBTI Activism Can Be Supported

In this episode, we're exploring what it means and what it takes to be supported during the highs and lows of everyday activism.

Podcast, Civil Rights and Freedom, Community Organising

One thing is always clear, no activist or activism organisation can work alone, and the work needs support. But where can that support be found, how can it be accessed, and when it comes through, how can you use it effectively? In this episode, we're exploring what it means and what it takes to be supported during the highs and lows of everyday activism. We'll be taking a look at how international and foreign support can be experienced by LGBTI activists in the movement, the difference it can make, and what it takes to get that support and make real use of it.

Joining us to chat about support and empowerment are Stefan Sparavalo from Da se Zna in Serbia and Marty Huber, from Queer Base in Austria.

Listen below or click here to listen and subscribe to The Frontline on your favourite podcast platform.