

The frontline: Navigating Change as an LGBTI Activist

Since the beginning of 2020, we have been deeply reminded that change can come unexpectedly and can wreak havoc. We've also seen in stark ways how our ability to deal with change is so often framed by bigger structures of inequalities, and most of us have been left with more questions than we have answers.

Podcast, Civil Rights and Freedom, Community Organising

This episode of our podcast features an enlightening conversation about navigating change as an activist, between ILGA-Europe's Executive Director Evelyne Paradis and Natia Gvianishvili*, who has been actively engaged with local, regional and international LGBTI and feminist movements for over a decade now. Natia began her activist life in Georgia, and she currently resides in Sweden, where she works with the Swedish Federation for LGBTQ Rights (RSFL).

Evelyne and Natia chat about how change affects activists and activism, and deliberately exploring our relationship with change so that we can find our own compass when navigating a constantly transforming world.

Listen below or click here to listen and subscribe to The Frontline on your favourite podcast platform.

 Since this episode was recorded, Natia Gvianishvili has been elected to the ILGA-Europe Executive Board*